

Sing On! is a play about a community theatre trying to put on musical about Queen Elizabeth I. The key word is trying. Anything that can possibly happen, does. Now that the mood is set, let me go over each costume.

1. Queen Elizabeth I - traditional queen-ware.
2. Queen Elizabeth II - because of a sore throat, devised by the playwright, the very pregnant prompter of the community theatre is forced to take the place of our original Queen Elizabeth. This outfit should be a duplicate of the original Queen's outfit.
3. Messenger - Royal messenger outfit without tights - give him some type of shorts.
4. Spanish Ambassador - a nice royal, traditional outfit fitting for his position.
5. Lady-in-Waiting - a nice looking, stereotypical outfit.
6. Major Doma - A very royal doorman. His costume should be half-fancy.
7. Lord Essex - A very royal outfit. MUST have tights with this outfit.
8. Mary, Queen of Scots - this part is to be played by a big actress - who looks ever bigger thanks to her larger-than life farthingale. To say that this costume can never be too big is an understatement. By the time she has her outfit on, Mary shouldn't be able to fit through a 4' door without going sideways.

Thanks for your time and effort,
